In this themed section on QLR we refer to many studies that have used qualitative longitudinal research as the main methodology. We will not reiterate these here. Instead, we provide some web links dedicated to QLR, specifically, to seminal projects, data archives and the secondary analysis of qualitative data. We do, however, provide examples of papers across disciplines, subjects and equality groups that have used QLR methods. Finally, we provide web links to the key methods journals of note for QLR and mixed methods research in social policy.

Resources relating to poverty, welfare reform and austerity

Qualitative longitudinal approaches are ideally suited to seeking a better understanding of the efficacy and consequences of welfare conditionality and enabling an exploration of how the policy assumptions underpinning this approach intersect with (and often contradict) lived experiences (Dwyer and Patrick, 2021: 63).

Council of European Social Science Data Archives \(CESSDA\) CESSDA provides large-scale, integrated and sustainable data services to the social sciences. It brings together social science data archives across Europe, with the aim of promoting the results of social science research and supporting national and international research and cooperation.

Inter-university Consortium for Political and Social Research (ICPSR) has been acquiring qualitative data since 2011, in addition to its significant survey collection.

The Henry A. Murray Research Archive in the U.S., holding key longitudinal qualitative and mixed methods studies, has been running since 1976. The archive is Harvard's endowed repository for quantitative and qualitative research data at the Institute for Quantitative Social Science. Our collection comprises over 100 terabytes of data, audio, and video.

The Qualitative Data Repository at Syracuse. hosted by the Center for Qualitative and Multi-Method Inquiry in the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs, is a dedicated archive for storing and sharing digital data collected through qualitative and multi-method research in the social sciences.

Nordic Network for Qualitative Longitudinal Youth Research – Nord-Lys

<https://www.youthresearch.fi/research/research-networks/nordlys> The Nordic Network for Qualitative Longitudinal Youth Research currently consists of members from Denmark, Finland, Norway and Sweden, but it is open for researchers also from other Nordic countries. There are currently several parallel longitudinal youth research projects using qualitative methods in the Nordic countries. This provides an interesting possibility of cultural comparisons and research cooperation.
